HARD TIMES

COME AGAIN NO MORE, was a refrain heard years ago. The prayer did not avail. Hard Times are here again. But—relief has come in the manufacture of 5 CENT GOODS, bearing double, and sometimes treble the value.

5 CENTS! 5 CENTS!! 5 CENTS!!!

Will buy more than ten or fifteen anywhere else in Bristol.

WHERE!!!

AT BOSTWICK'S VARIETY HALL!

Come, All ye curiously Inclined and See

THE WONDERFUL THINGS ON MY FIVE CENT TABLE!!

FIVE HUNDRED DIFFERENT ARTICLES for 5 CENTS EACH!

Don't be backward in coming forward while the fever is on. If seeing is believing, then come and believe that J. H. BOSTWICK has the cheapest lot of useful and fancy goods ever offered in this city. I say city, because it is a city of over Six Thousand Inhabitants, with a Mayor and Council at the head. Now, every one of these Six Thousand, (with Mayor and Council included) will buy at least one, and perhaps dozens of articles for 5 cents. They can't help it. It's like picking up jewels in the dust. Five cents will burn through your pockets when you see the goods.

☞ REMEMBER THIS! that my goods are Bought Straight! No old Shopkeepers. No Auction Goods with the dust of ages on them!

☞ No Mummies resurrected from the tombs of Cheops, or the hanging gardens of Belshazzar of Babylon, but fresh from the Metropolis where nothing is made in vain, and everything hangs lovely.

One Thing, "En Passant:"

I am represented as selling goods dear. I wish to brand that as false. I don't pretend to sell poor goods cheap and represent them as first quality, but I do solemnly assert that goods bought in the regular way, and of reliable wholesale houses,

CANNOT BE SOLD ANY CHEAPER!!!

THAN I SELL MINE!

If any one does sell cheaper, they'll do what Pursell's boiler did when his factory burnt.—B—t.

I AM ALIVE AND AT HOME!

If I'm not there, you will be pleasantly waited upon, most assuredly.

Adieu.

TWO.

BY JULIA C. R. DORR.

We two will stand in the shadow here,
To see the bride as she passes by;
Ring soft and low, ring loud and clear,
Ye chiming bells that swing on high!
Look! look! she comes! The air grows sweet
With the fragrant breath of the orange blooms,
And the flowers she treads beneath her feet
Die in a flood of rare perfumes!

She comes! she comes! The happy bells
With their joyous clamor fill the air,
While the great organ dies and swells,
Soaring to trembling heights of prayer!
Oh! rare are her robes of silken sheen,
And the pearls that gleam on her bosom's snow;
But rarer the grace of her royal mien,
Her hair's fine gold, and her cheek's young glow.

Dainty and fair as a folded rose,
Fresh as a violet dewy sweet,
Chaste as a lily, she hardly knows
That there are rough paths for other feet.
For Love hath shielded her; Honor kept
Watch beside her by night and day;
And Evil out from her sight hath crept,
Trailing its slow length far away.

Now in her perfect womanhood,
In all the wealth of her matchless charms,
Lovely and beautiful, pure and good,
She yields herself to her lover's arms.
Hark! how the jubilant voices ring!
Lo! as we stand in the shadow here,
While far above us the gay bells swing,
I catch the gleams of a happy tear!

The pageant is over. Come with me
To the other side of the town, I pray,
Ere the sun goes down in the darkened sea,
And night falls around us, chill and gray,
In the dim church porch an hour ago,
We waited the bride's fair face to see;
Now Life has a sadder sight to show,
A darker picture for you and me.

No need to seek for the shadow here;
There are shadows lurking everywhere;
These streets in the brightest day are drear,
And black as the blackness of despair.
But this is the house. Take heed, my friend,
The stairs are rotten, the way is dim;
And up the flights, as we still ascend,
Creep stealthy phantoms dark and grim.

Enter this chamber. Day by day,
Alone in this chill and ghostly room,
A child—a woman—which last, pray?—
Despairingly waits for the hour of doom!
Ah! as she wrings her hands so pale,
No gleam of a wedding ring you see;
There is nothing to tell. You know the tale—
God help her now in her misery!

I dare not judge her. I only know
That love was to her a sin and a snare,
While to the bride of an hour ago
It brought all blessings its hand could bear!
I only know that to one it came
Laden with honor, and joy, and peace;
Its gifts to the other were woe and shame,
And a burning pain that shall never cease!

I only know that the soul of one
Has been a pearl in a golden case;
That of the other a pebble thrown
Idly down in a way-side place,
Where all day long strange footsteps trod,
And the bold, bright sun drank up the dew!
Yet both were women. O righteous God,
Thou only canst judge between the two!

WAS SHE UNWOMANLY?

'Edna Farleigh, you are crazy! I never heard of such a thing in my life. I'm—I'm—' Mrs. Horton stopped for want of words to express her feelings.

Edna smiled, but she stitched away quietly, as she replied:

'I knew you would be surprised, auntie, but I think a moment's reflection will convince you that it is the wisest course. I have but one hundred dollars in the world, and the furniture that was left from the sale. It isn't much, but with a few inexpensive additions it will furnish the cottage. Dr. Gray approved my plans, and he will rent me the place very reasonably. The grounds are planted with fruit trees, currants, strawberry, blackberry, raspberry, and grape vines, and although they have been neglected, careful pruning and training will restore them, and they will amply repay it in fruit. Katy will stay with me, and there is Widow Marks' son, a strong, willing fellow, whom I can hire—'

'Good gracious, Edna! To think of hiring a man, the most improper thing of all. What will people say?' and Mrs. Horton sank back upon the sofa, completely overcome.

Edna answered coolly, as she kept on with her work:—

'I have as good a right to hire a man to help me, as Dr. Gray, a single man, has to keep a housekeeper. As for the people, I don't care in the least for what they may say.'

'But there is your sewing machine, Edna. It would be so much more womanly for you to earn your living by sewing, since you are determined to be independent; and as far as a home is concerned, you are welcome to stay with me as long as you live. Beside—' here Mrs. Horton hesitated an instant—'there is Thorpe Clifford; I do not think you are, as you say, obliged to take this extraordinary step. You will pardon me, Edna, but I think it very strong minded and unwomanly.'

Edna did not answer immediately. She was thinking how bright and happy every think looked a month ago, when her father was living, and she had hardly given the future a thought. And then when her father died suddenly, and his affairs came to be looked into, it was found that he was deeply in debt, and his house was sacrificed to liquidate it. She was entirely alone then, but her aunt at once brought her with the few things that were saved from the wreck, to her own home.

'Thank you for your offer, auntie,' she said, at last; 'but I do not wish to be dependent, and I could earn but a poor living with a sewing machine. As for Thorp Clifford, I do not love him, and the woman who would marry a man simply to gain a home, would be both wicked and worldly. I will prove to you, Aunt Helen, that I am not unwomanly enough to do that.'

She spoke with energy and spirit, and Mrs. Horton, watching her resolute face, and the determined light in her eyes, was silent a moment from sheer amazement. She never had understood her neice, and she was farther from doing so now than ever before. Of course, if Edna was determined to unsex herself, she had the privilege of doing so, but Mrs. Horton could not relinquish her attempt to dissuade her without another effort.

'Edna,' she said, suddenly, 'have you forgotten Leslie Holmes? What do you suppose he will think when he hears of this?'

Edna bent a trifle lower over her work as Mrs. Horton spoke, and her thoughts sped away to Leslie Holmes, seeking his fortune in far away California. 'Forgotten him? As if she could ever forget Leslie, who had been her chosen friend since childhood. They were not engaged, but Edna thought they understood each other, and they had corresponded during the two years he had been absent.

'If Leslie is the man I believe him to be, he will think no less of me, and if he is not, it does not matter what he thinks.'

Then she threw aside her work and went to feeding Chirp, her pet canary, while Mrs. Horton sighed till her spectacles nearly dropped off, over Edna's 'foolishness.'

* * * I * *

It was a pretty place that Edna had chosen; and Edna herself, in a ruffled dress of pink percale, standing under the shade of the arbor and glancing across the grounds, just completed the picture. For she had been fairly settled in her cottage now for six weeks, and it was with no little pride that she looked about her. The neglected apple trees had been trimmed into neat shape, and now were a gorgeous mass of pink blossom. The vines had been pruned also, and trimmed up, where they were growing finely, and giving great promise of fruit the present season. A large plat of neglected strawberries had been carefully cleaned out with plants left at the proper distances, and the whole top dressed with fine compost. The balance of the garden was most promising. Lettuce, peas, onions, gooseberries, asparagus—and in fact everything in the line of garden fruit and vegetables, were in a thriving condition.

John Marks had proved an invaluable assistant, and Edna's time was fully employed in overseeing the work, and planning for future operations. Katy was with her, and had the full care of the indoor work.

Edna had not been permitted to choose her mode of life unmolested. People had advised, sneered and exclaimed according to their various way of viewing the matter. But Edna had coolly ignored them all, and kept resolutely on, seeing which many of her former friends quietly gave her the cold shoulder. Dr. Gray and Thorpe Clifford were not among them. True and steadfast they stood by her, and their friendship had smoothed many difficulties from her path. She had written to Leslie Holmes in answer to one of his letters, and in it she had told him of the change in her worldly affairs, and what she had concluded to do. Since that time she had heard no word from him. He had always answered her letters punctually before, and somehow she felt as though her 'strong mindedness,' as Mrs. Horton persisted in calling it, had something to do with his silence.

With a last glance over the garden, she turned to enter the sitting room, where Chirp was singing his sweetest songs among the flowers in the window, when she was arrested by Dr. Gray's rough, hearty tones.

'Viewing your work, eh?' he said, stopping beside her and casting a glance around. 'You came, you saw, and you conquered, Madame Edna. Really, I didn't think it was possible to work such a transformation as you have accomplished here.'

'I am glad you like the look of it, Dr. Gray. Without your counsel and help, I am afraid I should have had poor success. If men would accord women more of such friendship as you have me, we would have a better world than we do.'

Dr. Gray looked away off where the hills and horizon met, and with a still further away look in his eyes, said:—

'I never was much of lady's man, Edna,' slowly and deliberately, 'but I have trotted you on my knee many a time years and years ago, and it is nothing more than natural that I should take an interest in you now. Have you heard from Leslie yet?'

It was the doctor's way to jump from one subject to another, and the abrupt question did not surprise Edna.

'No: it has been seven weeks since I heard from him. I wrote him when I removed here, informing him of my intended project, but have not received an answer yet.'

The doctor meditated, but said no more on the subject, and after a stay of half an hour he took his leave.

'It looks a little suspicious, and yet I don't hardly believe it,' he soliloquized, as he went down the path. 'I don't like to be mistaken when I form an opinion of any one, and it Leslie Holmes throws Edna over because of her go-ahead-a-tiveness, I shall lie, and he will deserve to be kicked,' and the doctor stepped a little brisker, as if he would find pleasure in administering the punishment, should it be necessary. 'She's got the true grit,' meditatively 'and she's bound to go ahead and win. She's a sensible, girl, and ain't afraid to soil her fingers to gain an honest living. If Leslie marries her he will get a prize.'

With this the doctor climbed into his buggy and disappeared down the road in a cloud of dust.

* * * * * *

'What shall I do, Edna? Every dollar is gone—even the roof over my head is not my own.'

'All gone, auntie? It seems as if somemust be left.'

'No; everything is swept away. It was all intrusted to Ackron, my business agent, and he speculated largely and lost, and has left the country. The debts had to be paid, of course, and it took the last dollar in the world,' and Mrs. Horton sighed audibly behind her handkerchief.

Edna sat silently thinking. It was now a year since she had moved into her cottage, and she had been successful beyond her most sanguine expectations. She was not looking quite as well as when we saw her last; a trifle thinner and a trifle paler, but that was all.

'Aunt Helen,' she said, looking up after a moment's thought, 'you can come here. I have much better facilities this season for raising fruit and vegetables than I had last, and with the ready market that is always here I shall have no difficulty in supporting us both.'

'Oh, Edna I shall be so glad, so thankful, too!'

So it was settled. And Mrs. Horton, with a great deal of respect and admiration, which almost amounted to awe, for her niece, which had been growing steadily as her scheme progressed, took up her abode at Edna's cottage; and Mr. Clifford sat about an investigation to see if any of the property could be regained. Clifford was an able lawyer, and the result was that in two months time Mrs. Horton found herself possessed of her home and sufficient of the lost property to enable her to live at ease once more.

And Edna? Despite her success, despite her 'strong-mindedness,' there was more lonliness in her heart then she would have cared to own, as she stood alone on the moon-lighted, vine-wreathed piazza the night after her aunt had returned to her home. For in the fifteen months that had passed since she began her new life, she had heard no word from Leslie Holmes. She felt a little bitter at times, and a little scornful also, as slowly and reluctantly the unpleasant fact that it had been as she half feared, forced itself upon her mind.

'I wonder, she thought, 'if he is like other men, who preach up womanly independence and usefulness, and then as soon as a woman puts her pet theory into practice, turns in disgust from her 'strong mindedness.' If he is a man he will honor me for my independence, and if he is not it don't matter.'

So absorbed was she that she did not hear the click of the gate latch, nor the quick, springing step that came up the walk, until it was close beside her. She turned then, confronting a tall, handsome bearded man, at sight of whom she stopped, paralized by conflicting emotions.

'Edna, my own, my brave little girl!'

'Oh, Leslie!'

Then she was in his arms, close clasped to his breast, all the doubts and suspense of the long months swept away, and only peace and sunshine left.

Then Dr. Gray came up the path, all unconscious, stopping in bewilderment as he beheld the apparation before him.

'Why bless my soul!' he exclaimed, in amazement, 'if that ain't—yes it's Leslie Holmes! You young dog, what do you mean by putting in an appearance at this late day?'

'Better late than never,' laughed Leslie, as he shook the doctor's proffered hand, 'I should have been here long since, but I heard Edna had moved away, and not knowing where, I never wrote. I changed my quarters over a year ago, which accounts I suppose, for the fact that I did not hear from her.'

'Humph!' said the docter. 'It is a good thing you can render a straight account. I suppose you came back rich, but I can tell you that Edna Farleigh is a greater fortune to any man than there is in the mines of California.'

Which was Leslie's opinion, exactly.

A careful political economist closely calculates that the women in this country might annually save $14,500,000 in ribbons which the men might spend in cigars.—Post.

USE OF DRESS.—No matter what man may write or say upon the subject, the womanly woman will always pay considerable attention to her dress, as she should. Indifference and consequent inattention to dress often show pedantry, self-righteousness or indolence. It is not a virtue but a defect in the character. Every woman should study to make the best of herself with the means at her command. Among the rich, the love of dress promotes some degree of exertion and display of taste in themselves, and fosters ingenuity and industry in inferiors; in the middle classes it engenders contrivance, diligence, and neatness of hand; among the humbler it has its good effects. So long as dress merely interests, amuses, occupies such time and such means as we can reasonably allot to it, it is salutary; refining the tastes and the habits, and giving satisfaction and pleasure to others. Sensible men like to see their wives and daughters well dressed, and take pride in their appearance. The woman who has not some natural taste in dress, some love of novelty, some delight in the combination of colors, must be deficient in a sense of the beautiful. As a work of art a well-dressed woman is a study. Consistency, in regard to station and fortune, is the first matter to be considered. A woman of good sense will not wish to expend in unnecessary extravagancies money wrung from the hands of an anxious, laborious husband; or if her husband be a man of fortune she will not even then encroach upon her allowance. It will be her study to dress well with as little expense as possible; for it is unbecoming to no woman's dignity to be careful of the clothes she wears, and to be economical in her expenditure. When love of dress is indulged in beyond the compass of means, it can not be too severely condemned. But it is the duty of every woman to dress as well as she can.

A PERSIAN'S WIF.—The cholera, which has made such havoc during the past twelve months both among the Anglo-Indian troops and their opponents, is an object of superstitious terror throughout the whole East. Many of the wilder tribes believe it to be a malignant spirit attaching itself to the steps of some man marked by fate for the purpose, who carries destruction wherever he goes, while himself unhurt. This strange fancy—which probably arises from the fact that the pestilence has more than once crossed Western Asia at a slow and measured rate, as if really attending the daily march of its supposed bearer—has naturally proved fatal to many a foreign traveller, in whom popular superstition had seen the bringer of the curse. On one occasion, however, the ready wit of a Russian explorer turned this peril into an actual safeguard. On reaching the first village beyond the Persian border, the inhabitants of which were notorious as brigands, he boldly avowed himself as the bringer of the cholera. "See," he cried, holding up a small flask, the cholera spirit is in this flask, and shall remain there so long as you treat me well; but let one of you offend me in any way, and I will let it loose to sweep you all from the face of the earth!" The terrified Persians fully believing his assertion, tried to avert the threatened vengeance by studied courtesy, providing him with everything he required, and actually sending several of their number with him as an escort, whose extravagant stories spread the terror of his name so effectually that he was treated with the greatest respect so long as he remained in the country.

THE CELLULOID MARVEL.—A capital example of those numerous industrial revolutions of which we have spoken, and which we have spoken, and which are peculiarly characteristic of America, is furnished by the new article celluloid. Although it was invented nine or ten years ago (by two brothers named Hyatt), its perfect manufacture has been regularly in progress for only about five years, and is considered to be still in its infancy; yet immense quantities of the substance are produced; it is converted into a wonderful variety of forms, and new modes for applying it are discovered almost daily.

This composition of tissue paper, camphor, and certain chemicals is already used for billiard balls, combs, backs of brushes, hand mirrors and other toilet articles, whip, cane and umbrella handles, every kind of harness trimmings, foot rules, chessmen, handles of knives and forks, pencil cases, jewelry of all kinds, pocketbooks, mouth-pieces for pipes, cigar-holders, musical instruments, doll heads, porcelain imitations, hat bands, neckties, optical goods, shoe tips and insoles, thimbles, emery wheels, shirt cuffs, collars, etc. Its use as a substitute for ivory has already exercised a world-wide effect upon the ivory industry, the falling off in the demand having been felt in the remotest regions of Africa.

THE MYSTERY OF THE LAKES.—There is a mystery about the American lakes. Lake Erie is only sixty to seventy feet deep, but Lake Ontario is 502 feet deep, 230 feet below the tide level of the ocean, or as low as most parts of the Gulf of St. Lawrence; and the bottoms of Lake Huron, Michigan and Superior, although the surface is much higher, are all from their vast depths on a level with the bottom of Ontario. Now, as the discharge through the river Detroit, after allowing for the probable portion carried off by evaporation, does not appear by any means equal to the quantity of water which the three upper lakes receive, it has been conjectured that a subterranean river may run from Lake Superior, by the Huron, to Lake Ontario. This conjecture is not impossible, and accounts for the singular fact that that salmon and herring are caught in all the lakes communicating with the St. Lawrence, but no others. As the Falls of Niagara must have always existed, it would puzzle the naturalist to say how these fish got into the upper lakes without some subterranean river; moreover, any periodical obstruction of the river would furnish a not improbable solution of the mysterious flux and reflux of the lakes.

While working as an engineer on one of the railways Mr. A. L. Holley made a wager with some of his fellows that he could run a locomotive a mile without fire, water, or steam, the locomotive to be taken empty and cold from the shop, and towed by another engine to a point at some distance on the road, where a level stretch of track favored the experiment. Young Holley rode in solitary state on his cold locomotive to the scene of trial, and, unsuspected by his escort, so arranged matters that during the trip the motion of the drivers and pistons stored the boilers with compressed air. This gave him, by the time the destined point was reached, an accumulation of power by means of which he ran his mile and won his wager.

—Secretary Thompson has returned from New York to Washington.

—Dry weather has tied up 400 boats on the Schuylkill canal above Reading.

—The lower portions of Cumberland and Franklin counties were visited by copious rains during last week.

—The trustee of the estate of Jay Cooke & Co., Edwin M. Lewis, Esq., announces another dividend of 2½ per cent.

—Representative Ellis of Louisiana says, that since the overthrow of the carpet-baggers in that State not one of the reforms promised by the Democracy has been effected.

—A company with a capitol of $2,000,000 has purchased thirty-three acres of pleasure ground in the north part of New York city and is quietly erecting a conservatory and zoological garden on a large scale.

—The Lancaster New Era says, that prices of real estate in that county are going up. Farms are once more selling at from $200 and $250 per acre, prices that compare with the best in other years.

—Mrs. James Horton of Atglen, Chester county, has been appointed tax collector for that borough for 1879. The appointment was numerously requested, as Mrs. Horton is an energetic business woman.

—Cremation has, perhaps, gained in favor more than is generally known. Many places in Germany have adopted it to some extent, and Paris has offered a prize of $4,000 for the best apparatus for buring the bodies of the dead.

—The Boston Herald says that reports from manufacturing towns in Massachusetts where last fall the Butler movement fairly boomed among the idle or half employed workingmen, indicate that the Republican ticket will make heavy gains.

—An American engineer has been studying the great wall of China. It is 1,728 miles long, and, being built without the slightest regard to the configuration of the ground, is sometimes carried 1,000 feet down into abysses. Brooks and small rivers are bridged over by it, and strong towers od both sides protect large rivers.

—The case of Widow Oliver against ex-Senator Simon Cameron came up in the court in Washington term Monday morning on a motion made by Colonel Cook to dismiss the appeal for a failure to print the record. On an examination of papers the affiadavit setting forth her impecunious condition was not to be found, and the case was continued until Monday next to allow the production of the depositions.

—Mr. George H. Pendleton's entrance into public life was, he declares, an accident. "I really loved the profession of the law," he says, "and desired to practice it, and if I was to meet with any distinction desired it to be there. It fell into the head of my law preceptor, the late George H. Pugh, to want to be United States Senator, and he asked me to run for the Legislature, so as to be a vote there in his favor. I ran and was elected, and Mr. Pugh reached the Senate. I attribute my political career to nothing beyond the desire to gratify Mr. Pugh."

—Mr. Joseph H. Dana, of St. Louis, is a perverse genius and his wife ought to spank him with a slipper till he begs for mercy. A few days ago an officer heard a pisto shot in Mr. Dana's house, and on going in found him lying on the floor apparently in the agony of death, with a smoking pistol at his side and his wife suffering as well any woman might under the circumstances. Mr. Dana got up. He was not hurt at all, and with a broad smile on his face explained that the whole affair was one of his little jokes, and that he was feigning suicide to see how his wife would take it. Mr. Dana's idea of a joke is a little out of the common. The policeman at any rate thought it was, for he very quickly marched him off to a station house and locked him up.

—The latest returns received at the Republican headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, indicate that the Republicans have 20 majority in the lower house of the Ohio Legislature and 4 majority in the Senate. The reports as to the State Ticket indicate a majority for Charles Foster of from 17,000 to 20,000. In the Northern part of the State, a great many Greenback men voted for General Ewing. The vote everywhere was very large, but no estimate has yet been made as to the total vote cast in the State. In Iowa the Republican majority will reach at least 30,000. There is a Republican majority of 70 on joint ballot in the Legislature. The party brought out about 33,000 more votes this year than two years ago. The two Congressional districts which were lost to the Republicans a year ago were regained in this election.

Senator Chandler in a recent speech gave the following account of the origin of Butlerism:

"I am informed that a new organization has been formed in the State of Massachusetts, an organization composed of divers and sundry conflicting elements. It's called in Massachusetts a new organization, but it's old; it's very old. This Butler party was old in the time of the last war. The elements of which it is composed were old in the time of the Revolutionary War. It was old when the Pilgrims landed on the rock in Massachusetts bay. It was old when Columbus discovered America. It was old when our Saviour was born. [Laughter and applause.] It was more than a thousand years old when our Saviour was born, and if you turn to the first book of Samuel, xxii., 2, you will find the Butler party of Massachusetts accurately described in these words: "And every one that was in distress, and every one that was discontented gathered themselves unto him and he became captain over them; and there were with him about four hundred men" [loud laughter], and they were called in olden times the "Adullamites," because all of these classes gathered in the cave Adullam."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13th, 1879.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—This is a quiet day, with us. It is the calm which precedes the storm, or the lull which in battle is followed by the terrible charge of reformed columns. On to-morrow in Ohio is fought that political battle which determines the fate of men, and perhaps of parties, for doubtless the presidential campaign of 1880 will have its issues, its platforms, and its leaders, all determined by to-morrow's results. Hence, here where the mass of population are dependent upon elections, there is an anxiety unfelt in other cities. Both Democrats and Republicans have marshalled their Ohio hosts from out the various departments where employed, and have sent them out to that State to vote "early and often," we presume, and there is no better indication needed of the importance of to-morrow's struggle than the effort made to secure the return of each and every voter. Both parties claim success to-morrow, and honestly too, so much so, that terrible disappointment awaits many a one who is to-day building sanguinely upon the annihilation of his opponents at the Ohio ballot-boxes.

The grounds of the National Fair, to be be held here from Oct. 28th to Nov. 8th, are being most rapidly put in shape for exhibitors and visitors. The main building is complete, and nearly so is the race track and smaller buildings. The entire exhibiting space has been taken by New Yorkers, Chicagoans, etc., and as some of the finest horses in the United States are looked for, the races or exhibition, we feel elated over our brilliant prospects for a brilliant show. Washington has always been so far behind other cities in matters of this kind that she deserves congratulation upon her awakening from that lethargy which has been content in the past to rent a hall in the city limits, filling it with flowers and fruit, and puff it in our city papers as an annual fair.

Our neighbor city, Alexandria, has just ended the most successful fair ever held in her antiquated borders, and she is happy over the suprising fact that 10,000 people in one day visited her exhibition, but we propose to enlarge upon her effort to at least quadruple degree, and to have an exhibition worthy of the National Capitol. It is to be regretted, however, Congress is not in session, for we will lack as visitors the many legislators who add interest to every horse race in the vicinity during the session, by full use of their pocket-books on the betting score.

The two sons of Stephen A. Douglass realize much difficulty in securing payment for their cotton claim, allowed them by the Court of Claims. The allowance of $88,000 was for cotton destroyed during the war, which belonged to their father. Now their various attorneys are suing in our courts for fat slices of the award, and promise, if their various exactions be sanctioned by the courts, to reduce the net amount to the boys, comparatively to a small figure. One of these sons, Stephen A., is a Chicago lawyer, and the other, Robert M., is the United States Marshal for western North Carolina, and though young men of considerable native talent, yet with the seeming lack of intellectual as physical energy vigor which enabled their father to fight his way up to the highest point of political ambition, save that of Presidency, their future has no promise of advancement in it, and they serve as another exemplification of the old saw, that great men rarely hand their talents down to their children.

Though Washington has not been since the war more quiet in the general, since during the recess of Congress than in this one, yet we haven't allowed our police matters to flag in the least, and we can present as fair a summers record of shooting, stabbing etc., as ever in the past. Last week one, Fleming, grew jealous of his wife and, while in a druken frenzy, stabbed her nearly to death. As soon as she recovers sufficiently to appear against him he will be tried. Several colored people have been killed, in brawls, or while acting as spectators in street fights where pistols were used. Saturday night last an old darky had a bullet sent through his brain by one of our colored desperadoes; the ball, intended for an opponent, missing him, and hitting the old man who was a quiet spectator of the fight. The preliminary trial of another rough has just terminated for killing a small colored girl who, like the old man above, was a mere spectator.

We venture to say that no city in the Union is less burdened with taxes than ours. Our Commissioners have just laid maximum levy of $1.50 upon each $100, and it must necessarily bring our expenditures within that limit. D. D.

—Mr. William M. Singerly, president of The Record Publishing Company, has succeeded in purchasing all the stock of the corporation and is now the sole proprietor of that paper, which will hereafter be known as The Philadelphia Record. The heading of the journal has been much improved by the removal of the eagle in the centre and the extension of the letters clear across the page. The Record has made for itself an enviable reputation in Philadelphia journalism, and now that it is under the individual control of Mr. Singerly cannot fail to add to the laurels already earned. It well deserves all the success it has achieved.

—Benjamin S. Clark, a lawyer practicing in New York, but living in New Rochelle, was roused at 1 A. M. Sunday by his wife, who thought she heard burglars in the house. Mr. Clark took his revolver, and going to the rear hall entrance, found it open, and some one pushing the door from without. Giving due warning and receiving no reply, Mr. Clark fired twice. He found that he had shot and killed his uncle, Joseph D. Barker.

—A very unwilling contribution for the University of Pennsylvania was once made in Montgomery county. In the revolution Jonathan and John Wright, who lived in the lower part of Hatfield township, had their farms, amounting together to 151 acres, confiscated on the ground that the owners were Tories, and the proceeds of the sale were applied for the benefit of the university.

—Within the last three months our importations of coin and bullion have amounted to $34,312,745, and there are at present more than $5,500,000 on the way, making an aggregate of about $40,000,000 for the three months. This is at the rate of $160,000,000 per annum, or more than three times our average exportation of gold since the full explorations of the California mines.

—The venerable Henry Henry C. Carey, the well-known writer on political, died at his residence in Philadelphia, on Monday morning. He had been in a feeble condition for some time. He was born in Philadelphia on the 15th of December, 1793. He was of Irish extraction. His father, Matthew Carey, was obliged to leave Ireland, toward the close of the last century, from his connection with the revolutionary politics of that period. After remaining about a year in Paris, he returned to Ireland and edited for a short time The Freeman's Journal (Dublin), and afterward The Volunteer's Journal. He was arrested in 1784 and committed to prison for an attack upon Parliament and the Ministry. Upon his release, he sailed for America and, November 15, 1784, arrived in Philadelphia, where he built up a publishing and bookselling business. Henry succeeded his father in business in 1821, and continued it until 1838, the well-known firms being Carey & Lea, and Carey, Lea & Carey.

Mr. Carey was regarded by his disciples as the founder and head of a new school of Political Economy. He started as a Free Trader, but he afterward greatly modified his views. His definition of value he himself maintained to be the first step toward the establishment of a science of sociology. He considered value to be "the measure of nature's power over man, of the resistance which she offers to the gratification of his desires. Its extent is limited within the cost of reproduction." With every step in the progress of man there is a diminution in the cost of reproducing the commodities and things required for his use, with a constant decline in their value as compared with labor, and increase in the value of labor as compared with them. The corollary from this view is, that any system which develops all industry and thus increases the power of man over nature is to be desired above all by the laborer, as it must increase the purchasing power by his labor. From this Mr. Carey deduced that, though the the immediate effect of the abolition of protective duties might be to cheapen commodities to consumers, it would not do so in the long run. The test of value being the cost of reproduction, commodities might by an unwise policy be cheapened, and yet their values increased. Free-trade might make iron rails cheap; but if it destroyed the rolling-mills and furnaces of the country it would be impossible to reproduce the rails at the same cheap price. Another doctrine of Mr. Carey was, that capital is the instrument by means of which man acquires power over the forces of nature. A third law was that man has always commenced on the poorer soils and passed to the richer—the opposite of the doctrine of Malthus, and a formula which logically leads to protection for manufacturers as for farmers. Such, very briefly stated, is an outline of Mr. Carey's idea of Protection. He did not deny that Free Trade was an ideal the realization of which was to be earnestly sought, but he held that the way to it must be through a period and policy of protection. He argued also that the happiness and progress of society are in proportion to the degrees of association and liberty which exist in it, Mr. Carey was greatly admired by the late John Stuart Mill, who, while he did not agree with his views, declared him to be the brains of the American political economists.

Notwithstanding his great age Mr. Carey continued to the last to maintain an interest in public affairs, and in the science to which he had given the chief labor of his life. He had the gratification of attracting the attention of thinkers, both at home and abroad, to what has been styled the "Pennsylvania School of Political Economy." To the defence of his opinions he brought something of Irish vehemence. He had a marked distaste for the arrogance of the English economists, and he was specially severe upon the British policy in India, where all the principles of his own system seemed to him to have been systematically violated, and pauperism to have been perpetuated by the want of a various industry and by the diversion of the profits of labor to the employer mainly, and to wealthy capitalists. For many years he held a recognized position as a leader of thought in one of the great parties. After the close of the war he drifted out of relation to his old allies. His views commanded less respect; and the great following he had when the protective tariff had been the theme of discussion dwindled when he opposed specie payments, and after resumption, insisted that it could not last. But he retained the high personal regard he had so long enjoyed and his wide reputation, great age and surprising vivacity made him a conspicuous figure at every gathering of Philadelphia notables down till within a few weeks of his death. He was an eager talker, a hot disputant and a genial host; and the fame of his blunt opinions of everybody who differed from him, and of the agreeable reunions under his hospitable roof will long survive in Philadelphia traditions.

Mr. Carey's works have been translated into German, French, Italian, Russian and Spanish. The originality of his discovery of the principle of economical harmony is not to be questioned, whatever credit for its development may be conceded to M. Bastiat.

—Mr. E. C. Stedman contributes to the coming number of Scribner the first part of his critique of Bayard Taylor's poetry and literary career, involving also the consideration of other American literature before the war. In connection with this article, the magazine will have two large portraits of Bayard Taylor, printed as a double frontispiece: one a cut by Juengling of the Cornell Memorial bass-relief by O'Donovan; the other an engraving by Cole from the last photograph of Mr. Taylor, taken in America, and the one best liked by himself and family. This article is the opening one of a series of critical essays on American poetry which, when completed, will make a companion volume to the author's "Victorian Poets."

—Mrs. William H. Beers ("Ethel Lynn"), whose new volume, "All Quiet Along the Potomac, and Other Poems," was published but recently, died last Friday, in Orange, N. J., of a painful internal disease. She is represented to have possessed an uncommonly cheerful and sunny nature, but have even in her cheerfulness she was subject to strange premonitions, one of which was that as soon as she printed her poems she should die. The first volumes were received from the press only a few days before that event, and they were bound in crape and placed upon her coffin.

—Mr. A. H. Stephens, as he waited for his train in the railway station at Louisville the other day, became object of an agreeable happening. An old friend, a jeweller, walked up to him and placidly presented him with a handsome watch and chain as a testimony of esteem and friendship. Mr. Stephens was naturally extremely pleased.

—The path of genius is strewn with the offering of humble admiration; the colored pedestrain, F. H. Hart, the person at whose feet a Boston club is about to lay a handsome silver ice-pitcher just manufactured for the purpose at Meriden.

—The Post-Office Department has dealt the lottery business a terrible blow, issuing instructions to postmasters not to mail letters addressed to lotteries or their agents.

—Last Sunday afternoon, in Cincinnati, a handsomely dressed young woman entered the Burnet House and sent the bell-boy, who responded to her call, for Mrs. M. Hickey, the advance agent of Miss Mary Anderson, the actress. Mr. Hickey seemed a little annoyed at the call, but repaired to the reception room. A moment later the report of a pistol was heard, and Mr. Hickey rushed from the room with the blood streaming from a wound in his head, exclaiming, "She has shot me. Arrest her. Don't let her get away," and staggered into the arms of a gentleman whom he met. A moment later, before any one could comprehend the situation, another shot was heard, and an employee of the house rushed into the room to see the young woman fall to the floor, dying from a shot fired by her own hand.

The young woman was a person of doubtful repute, from Syracuse, N. Y. Syracuse is also the home of Mr. Hickey. Since he left Syracuse Miss MacDonald has been following him from place to place and endeavoring to persuade him to return to her. Hickey had refused and told her that he hoped for something better, possibly a marriage with Miss Anderson. This seems to have enraged her beyond measure, and she determined to take his life and then her own. In the last she succeeded, and the first will probably also be a success. She died an hour after she shot herself. He is still living, but with a ball in the base of the brain, and there is little prospect of her recovery. Both bullets—the one intended for his life and the one for her own—were fired into the brain. Hickey is still conscious, but talks but little. He gave the woman's name and admitted that he had been trying to get rid of her for some time past.

A diary found on the girl's person solves the mystery which partially enshrouded the tragedy. In it are daily entries made during the year. They allude to the relations which existed between Hickey and the girl and are interspersed with expressions of great affection on her part for him. The latter dates show that after his business relations with Miss Anderson began his attentions to the writer gradually lessened, and that he finally sought to desert her entirely, telling her that he loved Miss Anderson and hoped to make her his wife. Coming down to the date of her arrival in Cincinnati last Friday the writer tells how she went to the theatre, saw Miss Anderson upon the stage and saw Hickey watching her with love beaming from his eyes. "He would make her his wife," she wrote, "if am only his mistress." The last entry was made evidently just before the fatal interview. It it she details her love for Hickey and his course toward her, and closes the last entry with these words heavily underscored, "He has scorned me. He must die.

Miss Anderson, in an interview with an Enquirer representative, speaks in terms of unmeasured regret regarding the event, but says that the supposition that Rickey was making love to her was entirely unfounded, and that no suggestion or word had ever passed between them upon that subject.

—At the Indiana Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, at Indianapolis, there took place on Saturday last a most interesting experiment. This was a test of the new audiphone, conveying sounds to the auditory nerve through the medium of the teeth. A class of girls, from twelve to eighteen years old, entirely deaf and dumb, were provided with audiphones, and a cabinet organ was brought in use for the first time in the history of the institution. A bright girl of ten or twelve years was the first to whom the test was applied. She had not heard her own voice or distinguished any sound for a number of years, says The Journal, and was regarded as stone deaf and speechless. She had not listened more than a minute when her features lighted up with a smile which told the whole story. Several other children listened with like result, all being able to distinguish some sound, and most of them following the different sounds of the scale. Several deaf mutes also noticed the difference between different letters of the alphabet. Only one, an adult whose auditory nerve seemed to be quite destroyed, failed to hear at all. A young lady who had not uttered an intelligible word since she was quite young, was used to speak. She had been listening, with the aid of the audiphone, to others talking, but when asked to say something herself was very reluctant. Eventually, however, she was induced to make the effort, and although she spoke quite low, being nervous and afraid to talk loud, she heard her own voice quite distinctly. The joy which the young lady felt at this glad discovery can be imagined better than it can be described. Mr. Richard S. Rhodes, the inventor, was present to superintend the test.

—The agrarian agitation in Ireland is taking a tangible and unexpected action. It seems that the popular leaders in that country have resolved to "agitate within the law," which was the keystone of O'Connell's organization. They declare that the large surplus still in hand after the Church dis establishment of 1869 ought to be applied to paying the poor-rate, which presses heavily on the people. When a poor law was passed for Ireland in 1839 that country had a population of over 8,000,000, and it was calculated that the rate would not exceed £295,000 a year. But now, while the population is reduced to less than 5,500,000 persons, the poor rate has increased to over £1,000,000 a year, an amount which, in the existing distress of the country, is an intolerable exaction. It is now contended that the reserved income and property of the dis-established Church shall be applied to the relief of the poor. This proposal appears reasonable and is generally approved of.

THE C. L. S. C.—These letters represent a literary society, a sort of Home College for the people, entitled "The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle." It requires forty minutes reading a day. The course covers four years, and is designed to give the college students, general outlook. It is adapted to busy people——mothers and fathers who want to keep up with their children, to give to their homes a literary atmosphere, and to make up for earlier omissions. For circulars setting forth the scheme address Dr. Vincent, Plainfield, N. J.

☞At Peters' Drug Store you will always find an elegant assortment of tooth and hair brushes.

☞It is announced that all the money needed to complete the building of the Texas Pacific Railroad will be furnished by European capitalists, and hence the Government will not be asked for aid.

☞Workingmen! Look to your interests and save doctor bills by using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

☞The City Collector of Baltimore has received an anonymous letter containing $1,450 in a wrapper on which was indorsed "For city taxes for 1878." It was turned over to the city conscience fund.

☞"Carry the news to Mary!" Health and happiness are found in every box of "Sellers' Liver Pills."

☞A woman in Maine followed a tramp four miles, knocked him over with a club, and not only recovered her stolen calico dress, but took his hat and coat to pay for the trouble.

☞"Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher," by purifying the system, softens the skin and beautifies the complexion.

☞James Hacket, a newspaper carrier, won a twenty-seven-hour race in Providence, Saturday, making 101 miles.

☞MY GOOD WOMAN why are you so out of sorts, never able to tell folks that you are well? Ten to one it's all caused in the first place by habitual constipation, which has no doubt finally caused deranged Kidneys and Liver. The sure cure for Constipation is the celebrated Kidney-Wort. It is also a specific remedy for all Kidney and Liver diseases. Thousands are cured by it every month. Try it at once.

☞People must be careful not to eat the "shot" frequently found in birds, as in many known cases it has been found to have a very serious effect upon the health.

☞Thus far the receptions of General Grant have been non-partisan, and have been participated in by all parties. He has been welcomed home as a citizen, who abroad and in his own country has worthily sustained the honor and dignity of the American name.

☞The cordial reception that Dr. F. Wilhoft's Anti-Pologuefor Fever and Ague Tonic has received at the hands of the medical profession in Louisiana certainly proves that it is an excellent remedy, and that the composition of it, as published by its proprietors, Wheelock, Finley & Co., of New Orleans, is indorsed by them. Against Chills and Fever, Dumb Chills and enlarged spleen there is no better remedy in the world. For sale by all Druggists.

☞It is reported from Baltimore that an express agent on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, during the transfer of express matter, laid two rolls of money amounting to $7,500 on a hen coop and afterwards forgot them till they were discovered by the merchants to whom the hens were consigned, and returned to the express company. The agent was discharged.

☞A SUCCESSFUL DAIRYMAN is the one that makes uniform "gilt-edged" butter the season through, and sends his butter to market in perfect condition. The best dairymen all through the country have by long and varied experience found that there is no article so perfectly adapted to keeping up the golden June color, now absolutely necessary in order to realize the best prices, as is Wells, Richardson & Co's Perfected Butter Color, made at Burlington, Vt. Buy it at the Druggists, or send for descriptive circular.

☞The kind of water obtained through artesian wells is very variable. Not untrequently salt water in large quantities is thus obtained. The large well now being bored at the State Reform School, Jamesburg, has reached a depth of seven hundred feet; the water, however, thus far obtained is so charged with iron as to be unfit for ordinary household purposes.

☞"DON'T KNOW HALF THEIR VALUE."—"They cured me of Ague, Biliousness and Kidney Complaint, as recommended. I had a half bottle left which I used for my two little girls, who the doctors and neighbors said could not be cured. I would have lost both of them one night if I had not given them Hop Bitters. They did them so much good I continued their use until they were cured. That is why I say you do not know half the value of Hop Bitters, and do not recommend them high enough."—B., Rochester, N. Y., See other column.

An audacious outrage was perpetrated a day or two since in the vicinity of Blue Anchor, a few miles from Camden, N. J., by a tramp. The circumstances of the case are as follows: A young lady named Meeser, aged about sixteen, had been picking cranberries about one mile from her home, and, having quit work, was on her return going through a large piece of woods, when she was approached by the man mentioned above and brutally assaulted. Her feet and hands were tied and she was unconscious when found. The neighbors offer a reward of $100 for his arrest.

☞A WISE DEACON.—"Deacon Wilder, I want you to tell me how you kept yourself and family well the past season, when all the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the doctors visiting us so often."

"Bro. Taylor, the answer is very easy. I used Hop Bitters in time; kept my family well and saved the doctors bills. Three dollars worth of it kept us well and able to work all the time. I'll warrant it has cost you and the neighbors one to two hundred dollars apiece to keep sick the same time."

"Deacon, I'll use your medicine hereafter."

SORTS.

—The Bristol Institute meets next Tuesday evening.

—Pike are being caught occasionally at the Mill Pond.

—The Temperance Lyceum does not show signs of reviving.

—The new foundry on Otter Street went into operation this week.

—Thanksgiving day will proably be celebrated by another walking match at Wheatsheaf.

—Mrs. Keene's lecture this evening, at the Methodist Church, will, without doubt, prove interesting.

—J. A. Martin, who has been for more than a year past in Dakota, is expected home next week.

—There are every day at the Mill street railroad crossing, all the possibilities for a railroad accident.

—Velocipedes so numerous on our streets put in an appearance at the Council meeting on Monday evening.

—The Knights of Pythias Lodge will give their grand annual supper and musical entertainment on the 31st inst.

—Complaints are numerous in regard to the crowds of men who nightly hang around Groff's corner and the canal bridge.

—After Nov. 1st the Bristol Library will be open on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 4 to 5 P. M., and on Saturday from 7 to 8.30 P. M.

—The enthusiastic No. 2 boys sounded the gong of their truck so energetically that it was cracked by the hammer, on Tuesday night, when the fire bell rang.

—The street oil lamps will go out and a patent gas arrangement take their places. It is presumed the latter will not go out (of use) as long as they continue to burn brightly.

—Twenty-five sheep which were stolen from Jesse Harper near Fallsington yesterday morning, were recovered near Holmesburg. It is reported also that the thief has been captured.

—Several Democrats went down to Philadelphia on Tuesday evening, to hear the returns from the Ohio election. They did not organize a parade of the unterrified when they returned home.

—A Councilman in a borough not far from Bristol, has acquired one of the accomplishments of a Congressman. He sits with his feet gracefully perched on his desk, at Council meetings.

—While the carpenters were at work at W. H. H. White's property, on Tuesday, eight men and two dogs on the opposite side of the street, successfully superintended the job.

—The yacht race is announced to come off next Saturday. The omission of a word in the announcement in our last issue caused the statement to be made that last Saturday was the day fixed upon.

—A change has occurred in the time of the running of the trains, but notice of the fact was not received in time to have the time table on our first page corrected. It will be corrected in our next issue.

—Major S. Willard Saxton and wife, of Washington, D. C., are the guests of Mrs. E. P. S. Pray, who likewise during the week enjoyed a visit from her son, James S. Pray, of the C. B. & Q. R. R. Chicago.

—If you see a boy rushing along the streets, regardless of objects around him, don't attribute his eccentric strides to his anxiety to get to school in time; he is only finishing the last "lap" of his five hundredth mile.

—It looked a little singular to see men hard at work at the Mill street railroad crossing last Sunday. Everywhere else quietness resigned. There the sound of the hammer and the pick-axe was heard all the afternoon.

—The Democrats make loud laments because Gen. Ewing, a Union soldier, was not elected in Ohio over a civilian. If they have so much fondness for soldiers they have, in this county, an opportunity of showing it by voting for Folwell, an ex-soldier, for Prothonotary.

—A six days' walking match is being arranged. The participants will be Andrew O'Donnell, Andrew Armstrong and James Dougherty. It will take place at the Pine street Academy. The admission fee will be three pins, and the winner of the race will be given the proceeds.

—The alarm of fire on Tuesday night caused the firemen to get their apparatus out and many of our citizens to awaken from their peaceful slumbers, and run through the streets as though engaged in a general pedestrian contest, to find that the origin of all the hub-bub was a fire, in a tree, in the Third Ward.

—Chestnut excursions are quite frequent but not every party that goes out is as fortunate as one this week which went—we won't name the exact spot—where chestnuts were not only plenty but ice cream and cake also. The last name articles did not come out of the chestnut burr, but were donated by the people at the farm.

—Post 73 turned out in strong numbers on Saturday morning last, to take part in the parade in Philadelphia. The march around the city was not a short one, but the boys being old campaigners were used to marching. The members of the Post arrived home safely about midnight, and were not long in seeking their homes to dream of the conquests they had made during the day.

—A fair and festival, under the auspices of the Ladies' Church Aid Society of St. James' Parish will be held in the Chapel, on 29th, 30th and 31st insts., opening at 4 P. M. each day. The ladies have endeavored to make the display even more attractive in every respect than that of 1877. The tables will be supplied with many articles of intrinsic worth and beauty. The restaurant will be under the same able management as before, and the music is expected to be of an especially high order. Among the novel features of the entertainment will be a collection of the skill of resident artists, and there is no doubt in the minds of the managers that this will prove a well worthy a visit, especially from those interested in art work, and will surprise all with its evidences of the array of talent in our midst, that Bristol has not generally been credited with. In the same department will be a collection of curiosities having artistic or historical value, kindly loaned by their possessors for the occasion.

Council Proceedings.

Borough Council met as usual on Monday evening. All the members except Mr. Fenton were present. After the preliminary business was over Mr. Scheide moved that the Street Committee be instructed to put in an iron pipe sewer at the foot of Mulberry street. The motion was carried.

Mr. Van Harlingen reported that the drainage of Green street could be obtained by the alley back of Albanis Groom's property, at a cost of $15; and that there was no other way except to grade Green and Linden streets, which would cost $160. The report was accepted, but no action was taken upon it, as it was thought better to declare Green street a public highway before doing anything in the matter. Accordingly Mr. Hoguet moved than an ordinance be passed declaring Green street a public highway, which, as amended by J. W. Wright, to include Pearl and Linden streets, was adopted, and the matter referred to the Ordinance Committee.

The Street Committee reported that 17 persons were using the public sewers for drainage purposes.

The Ordinance Committee was instructed to frame an ordinance announcing that three dollars per annum would hereafter be charged to all persons using the sewers for domestic drainage.

The following bills were passed:

Steamer Columbia, freight,	$1 25
Bristol Gas Light Company,	226 20
W. H. Peters, heater for Engine House,	60 00
Valentine Booz,	1 50
Chas. Saxton, care of lamps,	14 75
Samuel Holt, "	10 75
Chas. York, straightening vane,	5 75
J. Neal Brown, lighting lamps,	6 50
T. L. Bowers, work on street,	6 50
Frank N. Boos, gravel, &c.,	2 62
John S. Brelsford, coffins,	40 00
Simeon Brooks, digging graves,	9 00
Wm. Louderbough, Constable,	25 00
Jesse O. Thomas,	77 25

H. M. Wright being exercised over the cost to the borough for burying the poor, the Poor Committee was instructed to ascertain a regular price for which coffins could be obtained.

An appropriation of $190 was made for putting in the Mulberry street culvert, and $100 to pay the expense of putting in the heater in the fire company's building.

A petition from the America Hook and Ladder Company was presented, asking that a suitable building be put up for the company. A hundred or more names were attached to the petition among which were the names of several members of Council. Mr. Hoguet was about to speak upon the impropriety of Councilmen signing petitions to come before them for action, when the Clerk explained that the signatures upon the petition were in one handwriting, and the Councilmen said their names were upon the petition without their sanction. This caused much surprise, but was explained by George Stout, who wrote the petition, by stating that he had been authorized by the Hook and Ladder Company to sign the names of the members of the company to the petition. The matter was then referred to the Fire Committee.

A proposition from the Pennsylvania Gaslight Company to replace the street oil lamps by a patent gas burner for $18 per annum per post was accepted, to go into effect after November 1st.

The Street Committee was authorized to examine into the propriety of putting two crossings at Pond and Lafayette streets.

J. Wesley Wright called attention to the encroachments the Pennsylvania Railroad Company had made upon the borough property at the Mill Street crossing, and thought the subject should receive immediate attention. The Clerk was instructed to confer with the railroad company, and ascertain how the difficulty could be remedied.

Emmor Comly, having obtained permission to address Council proceeded to deliver a little lecture upon the danger to the public from velocipedes, and also called attention to the frequency of fast driving of horses through the streets. The Street Committee was empowered to look into the matter.

Mr. Peirce called attention to the condition of the gutters of the streets, and upon his motion an ordinance was authorized to be drawn, instructing property holders to have the gutters of their respective properties cleaned out and kept in good condition.

The Fire Committee was ordered to "see" that the roof of the Fire Company's building received a fresh coat of paint; and that the contractor who did the work upon the building completed it in a satisfactory manner.

Council then adjourned.

—The pedestrian fever has been a long while in striking this neighborhood, but it reached here last week and developed into a walking match at Weatsheaf on Saturday afternoon. From Bristol about two hundred persons went up to witness the contest, which to those to whom pedestrianism has charms, was full of interest. The competitors in the race were W. H. Butler, Howard Williams, Andrew Armstrong, J. McBride, John Cornish (colored), J. F. Collins, Caspar R. White and E. Prickett. The course was around the Wheatsheaf race track, which is estimated to be half a mile in circumference. At twenty-five minutes of four o'clock, the eight men started around the circle, and until the finish just two hours later, the scene was quite a lively one. At the end of his fifth mile Armstrong withdrew. The others kept on mile after mile, first one leading then another. Williams and Cornish soon showed that they were no ordinary walkers, or rather runners. Cornish especially developed a rate of speed entirely unexpected by the spectators. He might be called a sable Weston, for during the time he was going round the track he was continually up to some sort of monkey shine. He would get ahead of all the others, and then cavort and dance around the track, sit down and wait for his rivals to catch up to him, then away he would go and take the lead again. This was his style of performance throughout the contest. When the two hours were up, at twenty-five minutes of six, a pistol shot was fired and the race was over with only four of the walkers, Cornish, Williams, White and McBride on the track. Cornish the colored man, was declared the winner, having accomplished 13½ miles. Williams came second with 12¾ miles to his credit, while White was close behind his record being 12¾. The prizes were three silver goblets.

—Councilman Booz suggested a new borough office at the last Council meeting—that of street commissioner, to prevent fast driving and keep order generally. There would be no objection to having one for each Ward, if, like the special policemen, they would serve without compensation.

AN ORDINANCE
TO PREVENT THE USE OF AN INSTRUMENT CALLED SLING-SHOTS, OR THROWING STONES OR OTHER MISSILES, WITHIN THE BOROUGH OF MORRISVILLE, BUCKS COUNTY, PA.

SEC. 1. The Burgess and Town Council of the Borough of Morrisville, do ordain, that from and after the passage and publication of this ordinance it shall not be lawful for any person to use what are called sling-shots, or any instrument for the purpose of throwing stones or other hard substances, or maliciously throwing stones, or other missiles, upon any of the highway, streets, lanes, alleys, or commons within the limits of said Borough.

SEC. 2. Any person found using any such instruments in violation of the first section of this ordinance, may be arrested by the constable, or on the view of any citizen, and taken forthwith before the Burgess, who shall hear the complaint, and on conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of any sum not exceeding one dollar, and costs, or undergo confinement in the Lock-up, not exceeding twenty-four hours, or either, at the discretion of the Burgess.

SEC. 3. All fines collected under the provisions of this ordinance to be paid into the Borough treasury.

Enacted into an ordinance, this Fourth day of October, A. D., One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-Nine.

NEWSPAPER ARCHIVE®

A RHYME OF THE TIME.

BY NELLIE G. COE.

Miss Palina Eudora Von Blunky
She didn't know chicken from turkey;
High Spanish and Greek she could fluently speak,
But her knowledge of poultry was murky,

She could tell the great uncle of Moses,
And the dates of the Wars of the Roses,
And the reasons of things—why the Indians wore rings
In their red, aboriginal noses?

Why Shakespeare was wrong in his grammar,
And the meaning of Emerson's "Brahma."
And she went chipping rocks with a little black boy
And a small geological hammer!

She had views upon co-education
And the principal needs of the nations,
And her glasses were blue, and the number she knew
Of the sins in each high constellation.

And she wrote in a handwriting clerky,
And she talked with an emphasis jerky,
And she painted on tiles in the sweetest of styles;
But she didn't know chicken from turkey!

We are told that dirt is worked out of the ears by motion of the lower jaw. Perhaps this accounts for the cleanliness of ears among ladies.

"It isn't the thinness of the milk I object to," said John Shuttle, as he pulled out a small frog from the creamer, "it's the thickness of the water that it's mixed with."

The following verse contains every letter in the alphabet:

Except with zeal we strive to win
God's just and holy love,
We cannot conquer strife and sin,
Nor walk with Him above.

Detroit is worse off than Memphis. It has not had the yellow fever, but the sweet singer of Michigan has ejected this couplet upon it:

Yellow dog and yellow leaves
Thickly lie beneath the trees.

A package in a basket was left on the doorstep of a cautious Newport woman, who, having no desire to adopt a foundling, took the basket to the police station, and there found that it contained a twenty-pound turkey.

Dr. Barrice, a prominent physician of Plymouth, Wis., is said to have left two wives in Italy, and he admits that he has four living in this country. He has been arrested, and coolly says he was only experimenting until he got a woman to suit him.

Professor—"Is there any way to obtain good fruit without grafting or budding?" Student—"Yes, sir." Professor—"Please explain the process." Student—"Watch your chance, and when the farmer goes to dinner crawl over into the orchard and steal it."

The beauteous, buxom Bertha Bangs
Is one of our divinest girls;
She bangs the doors and bangs the chairs,
And likewise bangs her auburn curls.
She bangs on the plinny, too,
And bangs upon the light guitar—
But oh, of all the bangs she bangs
She mostly bangs her auburn bar.

"DOWN BRAKES."—"Ah, Louise, my heart is despondent. Ever since I have gazed into the depths of those lovely eyes I"—

"Hush, John, put an air-brake on that train of thought. Pa has introduced me to his new partner, and I am his for $2,000,000. That settles it."

A customs officer in San Francisco preserves the following wine card with Gen. Grant's autograph:

Steamship City of Tokio.
WINE CARD.

Person—Grant.
Stateroom—One.
Kind of Wine—Congress water.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF SNEEZING.—Sneeze on Monday, sneeze for danger. Sneeze on Tuesday, kiss a stranger. Sneeze on Wednesday, sneeze for a letter. Sneeze on Thursday, for something better. Sneeze on Friday, sneeze for sorrow. Sneeze on Saturday, your true-love to-morrow. Sneeze on Sunday, be ruled by the evil one all the week.

"O youth with smooth, sand-papered pate,
The night is dark, the hour is late,
Why do you linger on my gate?"

"I stay to help your daughter hold
This gate upon the hinges old;
Go in, old man you're catching cold!"

The old man sought his little bed,
And on it laid his patient head;
"I think my gate is safe," he said.

I love to hear the rumbling of the steam power press better than the rattle and roar of artillery. It is silently attacking and vanquishing the Malakoffs of vice and Redans of evil; and its parallels and approaches cannot be resisted. I like the click of type in the composing stick better than the click of the musket in the hands of the soldier. It bears a leaden messenger of dealier power, of sublimer force, and of a surer aim, which will hit its mark, though it is distant a thousand years.—Chapin.

He is a very small boy, just beyond the limits of babyhood. His precociousness is well recognized by those that know him, and sometimes people try to corner him in a logical way. The other day some one took him up and asked him if he was papa's boy. He answered 'Yes.' 'And are you mamma's boy, too?' 'Yes,' replied Charlie. 'Well, how can you be papa's boy and mamma's boy both at the same time?' was asked him. 'Oh,' replied Charlie, indifferently, 'can't a wagon have two horses?'"

A disconsolate man was asked the reason for his melancholy. "I owe money and cannot pay it," was the dejected reply. "Then" said the comforting philosopher, "you had better leave your melancholy for your creditors to indulge in. Isn't it enough that one of the parties should be sorry for what neither of the parties can help?" And the poor man went away with the cheering consciousness that when one is hopelessly insolvent it is bad enough to have all his creditors unhappy without indulging in the same luxury himself.

A painter of celebrity in Paris, when his first wife—he is now married to another—was sick unto death, was informed by her of her great fear of being buried alive, and thereupon promised to make an incision in her neck when he thought her dead. He, however, failed to recollect it. Some months after he was dining with a friend and paying court to the lady he wished to make successor to the deceased one. Out of a brown study he suddenly exclaimed: "By Jove, I forgot to cut my wife's throat." It needed long explanations.

HOW HE WAS CURED OF SWEARING.—John came in and inquired whether dinner was ready, and was told it was not.

"Well, why in the devil isn't it?" said he.

"Because," she coolly replied, "the wood was so——wet that the fire wouldn't burn."

"Why, Mary, what is the matter with you? Are you crazy or have you been drinking?"

"Neither," she said, and quietly proceeded to put on the dinner.

The beef didn't melt like butter between the teeth—it rather resisted all attempts at mastication, like so much India-rubber; and finally John blurted out:

"What makes this——beef so infernal tough?"

Mary looked up archly and replied:

"Well, John, I suppose you went down to the butcher's and without knowing the difference, picked out a piece of some——old stag that hadn't been sold for a month."

John jumped up, looked at his wife in disdain, and wanted to know what such language from her lips meant.

"It means just this, John; you are the head of the family, and just as long as you think it mainly to swear in my presence I intend to do the same! If you don't like to hear it you know how to prevent it.

EXTRAORDINARY VERSATILITY OF WESTERN "DUSTERS."—A day or two ago a motherly-looking woman of forty-five entered a Woodward avenue clothing store having a man's linen duster on her arm, and when approached by a salesman she said:

"Some one in here sold this duster to my son yesterday."

"Yes, ma'am, I sold it myself," replied the clerk, as he looked at the garment.

"Did you tell my son that this duster could be worn either to a picnic, funeral, bridal party or quarterly meeting?"

"I did, madam, and so it can."

"Did you tell him it made a good fly-blanket when not otherwise needed?"

"I did."

"That it could be used as a boat sail, a stretcher, a straw bed and a bed spread?"

"Yes, ma'am, I did."

"And that many people used them as table covers?"

"I did."

"And that they would last for years and then make excellent stuff for a rag carpet?"

"I did."

"And you only charged a dollar?"

"Only a dollar, ma'am."

"Well, when John came home last night and brought the duster, and told me all you said, I made up my mind that he must have been drunk, and I was a leetle afraid he stole the garment. I am glad it's all right."

"It certainly is all right, ma'am, and since he was here yesterday we have discovered that the duster is a great conductor of sound, a preventive of sunstroke, and that no man with one on his back ever dropped dead of heart disease."

"Land save us!" she gasped, as she waited for the bundle; "but who knows that they won't fix 'em so 'fore long that they'll raise a mortgage off the farm?"—Detroit Free Press.

HOW RICH MEN BEGAN LIFE.—Cornelius Vanderbilt began his life with an old pirogue, running between Staten Island and New York city, carrying garden stuff to market. With $2,000 or $3,000 raised from this source, he entered upon steadily increasing enterprises, until he had amassed the enormous sum of $50,000,000.

A. T. Stewart first bought a few laces at auction, and opened his way to success in a dingy little shop on Broadway, near the site of the wholesale establishment. Years of rigid honesty, shrewd management and wisdom in things both great and small, made him the monumental merchant of the nineteenth century.

George Law, at forty-five years of age, was a common day laborer on the docks, and at present counts his fortune at something like $10,000,000.

Robert L. and Alexander Stuart, the sugar refiners, in their boyhood sold molasses candy, which their widowed mother had made, at a cent a stick, and to-day they are worth probably $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 apiece.

Marshal O. Roberts is the possessor of $4,000,000 or $5,000,000; and yet until he was twenty-five he did not have $100 he could call his own.

H. Claflin, the eminent dry goods merchant, is worth, it is estimated, from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. He commenced in the world with nothing but energy, determination, and hope.

THE VALUE OF "ESQ."—A young man whose money didn't hold out as long as the State Fair dropped into the telegraph office yesterday and sent a despatch to his father in the interior to forward him cash to reach home with. When the receiving clerk saw that the despatch read "John Blank, esq.," he suggested that a saving could be effected by erasing the "esq."

"Well, mebbe you think so, but I don't," replied the sender. "When I am at home I can call him 'dad' all day long, but when it comes down to black and white you've got to 'esquire' him right up to the nines or walk home by the dirt road. Don't you dare leave that off—not with the roads as muddy as they are now!"

In about an hour the following answer was received:

To——:

John Blank, esq., forwards you $10 and you can have more if you want it.

JOHN BLANK, ESQ.

"Didn't I tell ye," chuckled the young man as he read it. "Dad's common enough when we're all home and rushed to get fall wheat in, but the minute his back gets rested and a stranger comes along he weighs more to the ton than any 'esq.' on legs. I tell ye, you don't know a man till ye have hoed corn with him!"

The late David Einstein, of Raritan, New Jersey, was for many years an extensive manufacturer of woolens. While at Boston on a business trip he mentioned to a business acquaintance that, although having transactions with Amos Lawrence for many years, he had never met him, and proposed to make his acquaintance this time. The friend explained that Mr. Lawrence was extremely reserved in his tastes, and would doubtless give him more attention if personally introduced; and offered to serve as a mutual friend. After introduction Mr. Lawrence inquired:

"What is your occupation, Mr. Einstein?"

"I am proprietor of the Raritan Woollen Mills, and have purchased wool of you these many years," replied Mr. Einstein, very much surprised that his name seemed to be unknown. After a moment's reflection, Mr. Lawrence asked.

"Have you always paid your notes, Mr. Einstein?"

"Always sir!" he replied, now beginning to grow indignant.

"Ah! that explains it," said Mr. Lawrence, in a tone of triumph, "I know those men who don't pay their notes."—Bos. Com. Bul.

THE VERY BEST.—Yesterday a lady stepped into a bird store on Kearney street to purchase a parrot for a household pet. Having examined the collection, she turned to the proprietor, and without otherwise designating her selection, simply said:

"I will take Honesty."

"Beg your pardon, ma'am," said the dealer, "which one is it you said you will take?"

"I will take Honesty. Please have him sent around to No. 582 Geary street."

"Honesty?" repeated the puzzled dealer. "And which is 'Honesty?'"

"Why, that one of course," said the self possessed customer, pointing to by far the fairest bird of the flock.

"All right, ma'am," said the ornithological trader, and as he was making the necessary change he timidly ventured to ask—

"And may I inquire, ma'am, why you call it Honesty?"

"Certainly," answered the customer, with a heavenly smile; that parrot is Honesty because Honesty is the best Poll I see."

The dealer was struck with a congestive chill, and gave the lady a half dollar short of her change.

Lady to peasant—How much for that load of peat?

Peasant—Fifteen francs, madame.

Lady—Oh, mercy me, that's too dear. Besides, I don't want such a small load—I want a two-horse load.

The peasant goes a to a friend, borrows his friend's horse and hitches it to the cart beside his own animal and returns.

Peasant—Here is a two-horse load, madame.

Lady—Ah, that is more like it. How much?

Peasant—Twenty-five francs, madame.

Lady—Very well; I will take it.

(NOTE.—This is very much like the procedure of the average bar-keeper who being asked if that is rye whiskey, affects to be covered with confusion, puts the Bourbon bottle into the ice under the counter rattles it, hands out again and beams upon the customer, who says appreciatively, "Ah, that's right—always give me rye.")

At La Grange, Texas, a saloon-keeper evades a Sunday law by assembling drinkers in his saloon, when a chapter or two of the Bible is read and discussed between copious libations of beer.

KIDNEY-WORT
PERMANENTLY CURES
KIDNEY DISEASES,
LIVER COMPLAINTS,
Constipation and Piles.

DR. R. H. CLARK, South Hero, Vt., says, "In cases of KIDNEY TROUBLES it has acted like a charm. It has cured many very bad cases of PILES, and has never failed to act efficiently."

NELSON FAIRCHILD, of St. Albans, Vt., says, "It is of priceless value. After sixteen years of great suffering from Piles and Costiveness it completely cured me."

C. S. HOCABON, of Berkshire, says, "one package has done wonders for me in completely curing a severe Liver and Kidney Complaint."

IT HAS WONDERFUL POWER. WHY?

BECAUSE IT ACTS ON THE LIVER, THE BOWELS AND KIDNEYS AT THE SAME TIME.

Because it cleanses the system of the poisonous humors that develope in Kidney and Urinary diseases, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Piles, or in Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Female disorders.

KIDNEY-WORT is a dry vegetable compound and can be sent by mail prepaid.

One package will make six qts of medicine.

TRY IT NOW!

Buy it at the Druggists. Price, $1.00.
